February and March Digital Citizenship Focus

Technology and the internet continue to provide new opportunities for both students and adults to communicate and interact socially. Whether students are texting their study group, flirting on social media, or voice-chatting on game platforms, middle and high schoolers can learn to communicate in safe and healthy ways. Families have a powerful part to play in influencing how students interact online! It is important for students to learn how to express kindness and empathy as well as how to respond to negativity and harassment. Research shows that rather than just telling children not to be negative online, effective bullying prevention addresses the underlying causes of those negative behaviors.
